Province bans development along floodways

Recovery funds.

Support pledged for those willing to move out of high-risk zones

JEREMY NOLAÏS

Alberta municipalities can no longer approve developments in mapped floodways and residents choosing to stay in homes closest to waterways will no longer receive recovery funding in the event of future disasters, the province announced Sunday.

As well, owners of homes in designated "flood fringe" areas will have to undertake mitigation measures — examples include erecting berms and flood walls, raising a home on piers and water-sealing a property — to receive future provincial support. The mitigation measures will have to be good enough to ward off a once-in-a-century flood. The sweeping changes come a little more than three weeks after rivers in southern Alberta surged to levels not seen in a near-century last month, displacing tens of thousands and creating billions in damage to homes, businesses and vital infrastructure.

"Ladies and gentlemen, the task to rebuild Alberta together is no less than monumental," Municipal Affairs Minister Doug Griffiths said Sunday. "We will rebuild in a way that makes good sense for future generations, we will build in a way that makes sense for taxpayers' dollars, we will build in a way that makes good sense for communities, we will build in a way that makes sense for families."

Edmonton has three communities in mapped flood fringe areas, covering parts of Riverdale, Cloverdale and Rosedale and requiring mitigation.

Bill Moore-Kilgannon, president of the Riverdale community league, said his community would be eager to find a permanent solution to flooding. "Riverdale would take this very seriously and would want to work closely with the city and the province to move quickly on an effective mitigation process."

Homes in the floodway and those in the fringe that have not been properly mitigated will also receive a permanent notation on their land title to notify potential buyers, Griffiths said. Maps have been posted to Alberta.ca that shade areas considered to be in a floodway or flood fringe, but the province could not specify Sunday how many homes the changes would affect.

Connecting with nature

City Farm program could dig us out of a food rut: Group

Sustainable Food Edmonton thinks that Edmontonians have become too detached from how their food is grown, produced and harvested.

The group wants to change that and is looking for $250,000 to get there.

The organization has begun a fundraising initiative to re-establish the City Farm program, which ran from 2005-08 and transformed a plot of land in northeast Edmonton into an agricultural experience.

"The general goal is to connect kids with nature and their food and how it's produced," said Areni Kelleppan, executive director of Sustainable Food Edmonton.

The farm will not only educate children on how farming works, it will also develop their collaborative skills by tasking them to work in groups to solve problems.

"It's not directed. All the kids determine their own leadership style and their own way of dealing with it," said Kelleppan. "They have to figure out how to take care of all the animals and crops within a team. They can't do it by themselves."

Closing the street with more style

Make Something. Festival barricades should be more eye-pleasing, argues one local designer

ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

An Edmonton designer is looking for new road-closure barricades that won't close off the city's festivals.

Nadir Bellahmer said the current road-closure barricades that are put up at festivals and city markets send the wrong message.

"The barricades instill a sense of fear in any Edmontonian's heart, I think. Anytime you see those coming up, it seems like there's trouble ahead," he said.

Bellahmer is sponsoring a contest that will see five finalists create their vision for a new barricade. Design submissions close at the end of this week, and the finalists will be asked to build prototypes that will go on display at the 124 Street Grand Market.

Bellahmer said he has put very few restrictions on the proposed barricades because he wants prospective designers to think big.

"I am looking for creativity and innovation," he said.

After posting the project on the Make Something Edmonton website, Bellahmer received one design submission that simply deconstructs the existing barrier into something more eye pleasing.

Kirsta Franke, with the 124 Street Grand Market, said she's excited about the idea of having new barriers.

"When you're holding an event like that, you want something to look good but also be welcoming to people," she said.

The market will have all the final submissions on display in late August.

Prizes

The five finalists will all be paid $200 to bring their creations to life for judging at the market.

- The judges' top pick will receive a prize of $300.

play in late August. Franke, who will help judge the final submissions, said she will be looking for designs that consider function and form.

"It's something that isn't just a show piece; it actually works for the people moving them."

Edmonton council. More candidates jumping into open races set for this fall

More candidates are lining up for the Edmonton city council race this fall.

Derrick Forsythe, community league president in Queen Mary Park, became the latest to put his name into the race for Ward 6.

Businessman Michael Oshry and Amber's Brewing president Jim Gibbon added their names to the race in Ward 5.

Terry Demers, president of the Callingwood/Lymburn community league, also added her name to the contest. The ward has no incumbent after the current councillor, Karen Leibovici, announced her bid for mayor.

Ward 11, where Coun. Kerry Diotte is also stepping out for a mayoral bid, has attracted several candidates. Former citizenship judge Sonia Bitar is seeking Diotte's current seat. Harvey Panesar, the owner of a mixed martial arts league, is also seeking the Ward 11 seat, as is Max Merrett, a businessman who serves on the Old Strathcona Business Association.

Jason Millar is joining the contest for Ward 2. Millar is a businessman and community-league president.

Hafis Devji, who works in commercial real estate, is the latest candidate to enter the race in Ward 10.

Coun. Don Iveson is not returning in that race; instead he'll be running for mayor.

Twitter experiment a success for youth worker

Open source. Man turned his account over to troubled youth

ANNALISE KLINGBEIL

annalise.klingbeil@metronews.ca

When youth worker Mark Cherrington went on vacation and handed his Twitter account to a few of the high-risk kids he works with, he didn't know what to expect.

"This might be brilliantly wonderful or a wonderful disaster," Cherrington said of the 10-day experiment.

Cherrington regularly uses his Twitter account to ask the community for help feeding, clothing and supporting the hundreds of youth he works with. While he was on vacation, some of those youth logged on to Twitter and asked Edmontonians for everything from a bunk bed to baby gates.

The youth also tweeted words of thanks to the "kind-hearted strangers" who helped them.

Cherrington has deemed the experiment such a success that he's set up a new Twitter account — @Myegstrong — for youth to ask the community for help if needed.

"You always get censored and vetted messages. These words and messages will be direct from the people that I

Verdict brings no resolution to killing of Trayvon Martin

Not guilty. Trouble may be far from over for Zimmerman as civil suit, rights case loom

U.S. President Barack Obama urged Americans to respect the decision of jurors on Sunday following the acquittal of George Zimmerman in the death of unarmed teenager Trayvon Martin, a case that has bitterly divided the country since the boy was gunned down more than a year ago.

"I know this case has elicited strong passions," Obama said in a statement, in which he referred to the slaying of the black 17-year-old as a "tragedy."

"But we are a nation of laws, and a jury has spoken. I now ask every American to respect the call for calm reflection from two parents who lost their young son."

Zimmerman's legal problems, however, seemed far from over a day after a jury of six Florida women cleared him of manslaughter and second-degree murder charges — a verdict that spurred largely peaceful protests in the streets in several U.S. cities.

The Justice Department said in a statement on Sunday that it's investigating Martin's death to determine whether federal prosecutors should file criminal civil-rights charges now that Zimmerman's been acquitted. The department launched a probe a year ago but stepped aside to allow Florida's prosecution to proceed.

Martin's parents are also considering a wrongful death civil suit against Zimmerman.

The verdict, many argued this weekend, proves the criminal-justice system is still inherently biased against black people, given that Martin, the unarmed victim, was successfully portrayed as the aggressor in the case. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reaction

U.S. recoils and rages

From New York to California, outrage poured from street demonstrations and church pulpits on Sunday as hundreds of protesters took to the streets.

In Manhattan, congregants at Middle Collegiate Church were encouraged to wear hoodies in memory of Trayvon Martin.

The Rev. Jacqueline Lewis, wearing a pink hoodie, urged peace and told her congregation that Martin Luther King Jr. "would have wanted us to conduct ourselves on the highest plane of dignity."

Chicagoan Maya Miller, 73, said the case reminded her of the 1955 slaying of Emmett Till, a 14-year-old who was murdered by a group of white men. Till's killing galvanized the civil-rights movement. Miller said she feels as if "nothing has changed in 58 years."

Civil-rights leaders, including the Revs. Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, urged peace in the wake of the verdict. Jackson said the legal system "failed justice," but violence isn't the answer.

Not everyone heeded those calls.

In Oakland, Calif., some demonstrators broke windows, burned U.S. flags and started street fires. Some also vandalized a police car and used spray paint to scrawl anti-police graffiti on roads and a courthouse.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

2012 killing

Martin was walking to his father's house in Sanford, Fla., when he was killed.

- Zimmerman claimed he shot in self-defence.

Volunteers offer themselves to Lac-Mégantic

Online altruism.

New website facilitates efforts to rebuild Quebec community

The loss of her best friend in the Lac-Mégantic disaster hasn't sapped Isabelle Cote of her desire to help others.

While mourning the death of her friend of 40 years, since childhood, Cote has volunteered her time to others in the tragedy-stricken community.

She's not alone. "I want to somehow repay the love and friendship she gave me," said Cote of her long-time companion, Natasha, who was one of many who walked into the Musi-Cafe bar a week ago and never walked out.

After searching online, Cote, who currently lives in Trois-Rivières, Que., found a site that allowed her to offer volunteer services.

She posted that offer on the online forum on the Support Lac-Mégantic website. Scores of people have posted messages like hers.

The website, which is partnering with the Red Cross, has begun allowing volunteers to publicly offer their services to the people of Lac-Mégantic.

The community is in the early stages of what promises to be a difficult recovery, with its downtown core razed to the ground and 50 of its residents presumed killed.

Anyone who wants to lend a hand can provide their first and last name, an email address and details of what services they can offer.

'It was pretty severe.' Manitoba village bears brunt of possible tornado

The reeve of Pipestone, Man., is relieved no one was seriously injured after what Environment Canada says was likely a tornado tore through the rural municipality Saturday night.

"It ripped the roofs off buildings, flipped a mobile (home), took a part of the hall and part of the rink — so it was pretty severe," Ross Tycoles told Metro Sunday morning from his home in Reston, Man. "It was bad enough here, but Pipestone is the one that really got it."

Tycoles said the fast-moving storm — which dropped hail as big as golf balls in the area as it moved into the southwest corner of Manitoba along Highway 2 from Saskatchewan — levelled a number of trees and knocked out power for the more than 200 people in the village of Pipestone.

The storm couldn't have come at a worse time for the RM of Pipestone, which declared a state of emergency in late June after heavy rains brought more than six inches of water in about six hours to Reston.

Lac-Mégantic priest struggles for right words at Sunday mass

Train derailment.

As the official death toll climbed to 35 Sunday, residents in small community struggled to come to terms with loss

The parish priest in a Quebec town gripped by tragedy said Sunday that he struggled to find the words to comfort his flock.

Fighting despair

"Our faith doesn't remove our suffering, but it ensures despair won't have the last word."

Steve Lemay, parish priest at Ste-Agnes Church in Lac-Mégantic, Que.

Steve Lemay said he and his colleagues have tried to bring some solace to Lac-Mégantic in the week since a horrific train derailment killed an estimated 50 people and razed the town centre.

But he said some residents haven't even begun to grieve and it's far too soon to speak of recovery. With many questions about the crash still unanswered, the loss hasn't fully sunk in, he told reporters outside the Ste-Agnes Church.

"We're far from acceptance," he said, adding many families haven't been able to say goodbye to the loved ones whose lives were cut short.

"Normally, when we lose someone we love, we can see them, we can make contact.

"We don't have that here."

Two more bodies were pulled from the rubble

Sunday, bringing the official death toll to 35. Fifteen people remained missing, more than a week after the disaster.

Authorities demolished two buildings because they were said to be unstable and posed a threat to crews working there.

A heat wave has added another complication to crews sifting through the wreckage.

Quebec provincial police Lt. Michel Brunet said three firefighters suffered minor injuries Sunday as temperatures hovered around 30 C.

It's even hotter on site, Brunet said.

"For the workers, they have to wear heavy equipment and masks and they sometimes need to go into (areas) that can be 40 or 50 degrees," he said in an interview.

Travelling officials warned of dangers abroad

Security. The spy agency cautions that in some countries the threat of kidnapping is significant

Canada's spy agency has quietly warned travelling government officials they might be drugged, kidnapped or blackmailed after being enticed into a sexual "honey trap" by an attractive stranger.

Foreign intelligence services see federal employees — and the proprietary information they carry — as prized targets, and precautions must be taken to prevent the pilfering of secret files, says the Canadian Security Intelligence Service.

The threat has prompted

What to expect

- Among the CSIS advice to officials: Conceal baggage tags, assume luggage will be searched in transit, and know that in many countries you will be subject to physical surveillance. Searches may entail copying of documents, including those on a laptop or smartphone.

CSIS to prepare a special guide advising Canadian officials to be wary of saying too much around taxi drivers, letting a laptop computer out of their sight, or even stashing confidential material in a hotel safe.

A copy of the 2012 CSIS publication, "Far From Home: A Travel Security Guide for Government Officials," was obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

Espionage is at a level equal to that seen during the Cold War, and Canada is a leader in technology, energy and other economic sectors, Dick Fadden, then head of CSIS, says in a foreword to the guide.

"We also have prized political connections owing to our close relationship with the United States and to our membership in important international bodies," writes Fadden, who recently became deputy defence minister.

Ace of Diamonds. 600 people in N.Y. set record for big human playing card

Six-hundred people dressed in coloured ponchos have aced their attempt to set a record for the largest human playing card in Verona, N.Y.

The Oneida Indians say the record was set Saturday by 600 guests at the tribe's Turning Stone Resort Casino Event Center in central New York.

The 600 guests wore either a white or a red rain poncho and were told where to stand to form a human version of the ace of diamonds. Once in position, they had to remain in place for five minutes.

A Guinness World Records official was at Turning Stone to verify the record.

Rowling outed as 'new' writer

Chamber of secrets.

Critics called mystery novel with pen name a 'scintillating debut'

An ex-military man tries his hand at writing, publishes a debut detective novel, and wins critical acclaim. But here's the twist: The true identity of the author is none other than Harry Potter creator J.K. Rowling.

It's impressive literary wizardry by Rowling, who said she relished the freedom of writing The Cuckoo's Calling under her pseudonym, Robert Galbraith.

Cross-writing

J.K. Rowling

"Being Robert Galbraith has been such a liberating experience."

J.K. Rowling

"I hoped to keep this secret a little longer," she said in a statement released by her publicist on Sunday. "It has been wonderful to publish without hype or expectation, and pure pleasure to get feedback from publishers and readers under a different name."

The Cuckoo's Calling, a story about a war veteran turned private investigator who is called in to probe the mysterious death of a model, was published to rave reviews in April.

The Sunday Times said it was investigating "how a first-time author with a background in the army and the civilian security industry could write such an assured debut novel" when it connected the dots. The paper said clues included the fact that Rowling and Galbraith shared the same agent and editor, and said the style and subject resembled Rowling's work. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New bones about it: Floods fuel fossil finds

Cody Van Megen's dog Moose examines one of many large bones found along the banks of the Bow River, heavily eroded by recent flooding, in Calgary on Friday. While Van Megen was bracing for devastation, he didn't expect to find a set of gigantic rib bones sticking out of the riverbank. Van Megen got in touch with Francois Therrien, a paleontologist at the Royal Tyrrell Museum in Drumheller. Therrien told him the discovery could be significant — potentially signalling an early bison fossil — and a team will examine in August. LARRY MACDOUGAL/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Agriculture. Robots could (re)revolutionize industry

On a windy morning in California's Salinas Valley, a tractor pulled a refrigerator-sized contraption over rows of budding iceberg lettuce plants. Engineers from Silicon Valley tinkered with software on a laptop to ensure the machine was eliminating the right buds.

Hired by an agricultural produce company, the engineers were testing the Lettuce Bot, a machine that can "thin" a field of lettuce in the time it takes about 20 workers to do the job by hand. It is part of a new generation of machines that target the last frontier of agricultural mechanization: Fruits and vegetables destined for the fresh market, which have thus far resisted mechanization because they're sensitive to bruising.

In this region known as America's Salad Bowl, the machines could prove revo-

Flight 214. Asiana payout to depend on nationality

When the courts have to figure compensation for people aboard Flight 214, the potential payouts will probably be vastly different for Americans and passengers from other countries, even if they were seated side by side as the Asiana jetliner crash-landed.

An international treaty governs compensation to passengers harmed by international air travel — from damaged luggage to crippling injuries and death. The pact is likely to close U.S. courts to many foreigners and force them to pursue their claims in Asia and elsewhere, where lawsuits are rarer, harder to win and offer smaller payouts.

The flight that broke apart Saturday at the San Francisco airport was carrying 141 Chinese, 77 South Koreans, 64

Hybrid fish. Researcher casting for anglers

Anglers in Saskatchewan are being asked to help reel in information about a hybrid fish.

Chris Somers, an ecologist at the University of Regina, is hoping that anyone looking for good fishing holes before an upcoming walleye tournament will bring him a specimen that could be a cross between a walleye and a sauger. It's known as a saugeye.

"What we are trying to do is to get a DNA-based approach up and running to detect hybrids reliably," said Somers.

What's not clear is how often the two species merge and what role the hybrids play in the fishery or in changing the ecology of fish.

"I don't think anybody is

Critical infrastructure

Cyber security in private sector a big problem: Records

Gaps in the cyber-security efforts of Canadian corporations could be leaving them open to sophisticated attacks by hackers, records show.

"The current situation is that there are an increasing number of new software vulnerabilities that can be exploited to gain access to companies' networks," reads a July 2012 memo obtained from Public Safety Canada under the Access to Information Act.

"The scale of the problem is significant. The cost of maintaining a highly secure network is high for each company, and they may not be willing to make that investment."

The smooth operation of critical infrastructure assets is integral to the country's economic, political and social well-being, according to a report by the auditor general published last fall. But despite a commitment to protecting critical infrastructure, the federal government has been slow to build partnerships with stakeholders, the report states. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Being open to new culture helps newcomer adapt

While newcomers face many challenges in a new country, Muhammad Adnan sees the positive side of his hard work over the past year, juggling day and night jobs. "I never had time to notice the snow since I went from my work to the bus stop to my next job," laughs the native of Faisalabad, Pakistan. "That's good, because it is very cold here."

Adnan has kept this upbeat attitude since he arrived in Saskatoon. Although his previous career was a risk officer in a commercial bank, Adnan quickly found work as a construction site supervisor. When the prairie winter halted building work, Adnan trained as a tax preparer at a tax return agency and later added a night shift at a pizza shop to pay the bills and support family back home.

"As an immigrant, we have to work hard," explains Adnan, who holds a Masters degree in finance. "Prepare your mind, because whatever you find, you just have to do."

But Adnan notes that his long hours of work and study helped him gain an understanding of Canadian culture, which is critical to finding a job in your own profession. "The main thing is to know the culture," he says, noting that he's made friends who are Canadians, Indians and Nepalese. "It's also good to go to immigrant associations since they help introduce you to the community."

For example, in his part-time job checking tax filer returns, he's learnt the importance of delivering good service to make customers feel comfortable. "Often clients come in worried or angry, but if you treat them in a friendly way and explain everything, you can make them more relaxed."

Adnan also observed this when he accompanied a classmate to open an account at Scotiabank's Commercial Banking and Main Branch in Saskatoon. They were pleasantly surprised that Sarah Rowe, Personal Banking Officer, took her time to patiently explain the banking options for newcomers. "She answered all our questions, and re-explained things until you got it, including how immigrants can get a credit card and mortgage."

Adnan was so impressed that he made another appointment with Sarah to open his own Scotiabank account through the Scotiabank StartRight® Program<sup>1</sup>. The program includes a free day-to-day bank account for one year<sup>2</sup>, a wide range of credit card options<sup>3</sup> and a number of other customized services and benefits.

"I had opened an account at another bank, but they just gave me a form to sign and that's it. They didn't explain how to build credit or get car financing<sup>4</sup>," recalls Adnan, who has since switched his account to Scotiabank.

While Adnan continues to look for work within his field, he's optimistic that his efforts will pay off. "Everyone has to start somewhere, but to get a good job or achieve your goals you've got to get to know the people and the culture. All your hard work will reward you if you think positive."

THIS ADVERTORIAL IS PREPARED BY SCOTIABANK®.

Finance professional Muhammad Adnan is busy adapting to life in Canada, by learning the culture and seeking practical advice from Scotiabank.

DON'T LET CRANKS KILL CANAL

The proposed canal that would run from 95th Avenue and 105th Street along 96th Avenue and down to the river is a winner on multiple fronts.

But perhaps the most important part of the proposal is that it is not going to cost a tonne of tax dollars.

It's been a long time since we have heard about any idea for Edmonton that doesn't come with a request for city money to make it a reality. It seems that everyone with an allegedly bright idea thinks the city should help fund it.

That's what makes the canal project different: it will be developed with $50 million of private money. We would eventually pay that back through the sale of land in Rosedale Flats, but that would only happen if the plan produces the benefits it is supposed to.

I think it will.

URBAN COMPASS

Terence Harding

edmonton@metronews.ca

There's no website yet for you to see what is envisioned, but the Rosedale Flats area would be developed with commercial and residential properties alongside the canal. If you have ever looked at the area around Telus Field, you would know that right now it is filled with plenty of nothing. Commercial and residential development in the area would make it a lot more viable to do something with the Rosedale generating station. It would also help make the proposed funicular a reality.

Our river valley sets Edmonton apart from other cities — but we haven't really made it a part of our everyday lives. There's no place to have a meal, get a cup of coffee or do much more than ride a bike or go for a walk. We can and must do better.

As with most proposals of this type, there will no doubt be a plethora of natters, niggles and naysayers. Every time we want to do something in the river valley, there are those who see it as a religious icon that should be left exactly the way it is.

The fact that it is private money that will be used to develop the canal will not keep some people from maintaining that we should spend the money someplace else. And there will be those who think the whole idea is just plain silly. However, I think the majority of Edmontonians will see the proposal for exactly what it is: Imaginative, innovative and interesting.

Today's weak labour market for youth is not only hurting young Canadians. It's also taking a financial toll on their middle-class parents.

There are still 200,000 fewer jobs for young Canadians than before the recession. According to TD Bank, young Canadians are not only losing out today, they also face lower wages for more than a decade as they try to catch up on missed work experience. A growing number of 20-somethings are now competing for unpaid internships in an attempt to get ahead.

While job prospects for young Canadians have deteriorated, the price of everything from tuition to rent and groceries has gone up. Yet student debt levels have remained relatively constant. So who is picking up the tab?

It's middle-class parents who are stepping in to financially support their adult children.

According to TD, more than half of baby-boom parents have continued to financially support their adult children, even after they leave school. Instead of listening to Canadians on this issue, the Harper Conservatives have cut the number of youth jobs in the Canada Summer Jobs Program by more than half, and frozen the skills training budget at 2008 levels without allowing for either inflation or population growth.

Remembering Monteith

United in grief.
Celebrities, fans send out condolences to Glee actor's family, police won't speculate on cause of death

Tributes from celebrities and fans of the popular television series Glee were pouring in on social media Sunday as those who admire Canadian actor Cory Monteith learned of his sudden death.

The 31-year-old actor, who shot to fame as football player and singer Finn Hudson on the popular television series, was found dead at a downtown Vancouver hotel room on Saturday.

Police told reporters the cause of death still must be determined, but investigators do not believe foul play was involved.

Once news broke of Monteith's death, fellow celebrities and Glee cast members took to Twitter to express their condolences.

Dot-Marie Jones, who plays Coach Shannon Beiste, wrote, "I am blessed to have worked with him and love him so much. My heart is with his family and our whole Glee family. I love you all."

And Lauren Potter, who plays cheerleader Becky Jackson said, "I am totally heartbroken right now. I love Cory so much this hurts my heart. I hope my Glee family is OK right now. I love them all. Cory was always so nice to me. I have so many good memories."

Monteith's co-star and girlfriend Lea Michele, who plays Finn's girlfriend on-screen, has issued a brief statement, requesting privacy.

Fans from B.C., where Monteith grew up, also mourned the death of the local celebrity.

"When I first saw Glee, I was ecstatic for Cory. A local boy and a great guy. My thoughts to his family and friends. He will be remembered," wrote Vancouver actor Osric Chau.

The executive producers of Glee and Fox also issued a statement on Saturday night, saying, "We are deeply saddened by this tragic news. Cory was an exceptional talent and an even more exceptional person. He was a true joy to work with and we will all miss him tremendously.

Our thoughts and prayers are with his family and loved ones."

Acting Vancouver Police Chief Doug LePard told reporters on Saturday that Monteith's body was found around noon after he failed to check out from his room as scheduled. LePard said the actor had been with some other people in the room the night before, but video and electronic records show that Monteith entered the room by himself on Saturday morning.

His death comes several months after he told People magazine that he had admitted himself into rehab for substance abuse, but police declined to speculate whether there was any connection.

Peripatetic Monteith

Before becoming an actor, Monteith worked as a Walmart people greeter in Nanaimo, B.C., as well as a taxicab driver, school bus driver and roofer. He had minor roles in other films before joining the cast of Glee, which debuted in 2009. He also was drummer for the California-based band Bonnie Dune, and was an avid supporter of the Project Limelight Society, a Vancouver charity that offers a theatre program to at-risk youth.

Orange is the New Black. New Netflix series about a socialite doing time puts a female spin on life as an inmate

The new Netflix series Orange is the New Black opens with the provocative image of two naked women in a shower, entwined in a passionate embrace. It's the kind of brazen kickoff obviously designed to grab attention, but star Taylor Schilling says the show's envelope-pushing nudity is different — this time the salacious scenes come from a resolutely female point-of-view.

"It doesn't to me feel like it's as sexualized as other scripts that I've read," Schilling said by phone from New York of the dramedy.

Schilling stars as privileged Brooklyn socialite Piper Chapman, who is slapped with a 15-month sentence at a U.S. federal penitentiary when authorities link her to a hard-as-nails female drug-runner she romanced — and ferried cash for — more than a decade earlier.

Schilling lauds an array of racially diverse actresses who fill out the cast and praises Kohan for offering a rare chance to see a variety of female characters on the small screen. Even the blond and seemingly delicate character Piper challenges convention, she said.

"It's a moment of divine intervention I think when you find a role that can really be a full-bodied woman, and actually I mean that in every sense of the word," said Schilling.

"To be a dynamic character like we all are that isn't just a love interest or isn't just the mom or isn't just the daughter (is great) — a woman that's really sitting in the seat of her own experience, that's in the middle of her own narrative, discovering who she is and that's valued just by virtue of that seemed valuable enough to be a story in and of itself.... That's, like, radical.

Jim Bennett: Lucky to be alive and loving Get Lucky

Viral success. Bass player earns online popularity with Daft Punk cover months after beating very serious condition

Even before his homemade Daft Punk cover soared to Internet prominence, Vancouver's Jim Bennett felt he was lucky indeed — just to be alive.

The 30-year-old had been diagnosed with necrotizing pancreatitis (the sudden inflammation of the pancreas) on New Year's Day, touching off a nightmarish few months that he spent confined to a hospital bed. Unbeknownst to him, Bennett had been assessed with a mere 10 per cent chance of survival. But he did survive. And while still immersed in the arduous process of recovery, he picked up his bass guitar and — on a whim — recorded a cover of Daft Punk's luminous summer smash Get Lucky.

Since uploading the tune to YouTube a couple weeks ago, more than 560,000 viewers have been drawn to the clip.

Bass player Jim Bennett feels lucky to be alive and is now focusing on his music. CANADIAN PRESS

"I thought, 'I'll record this and have a good time' kind of thing. ... It was just for my own amusement and for fun," said the cheerful Bennett down the line from his B.C. home.

"I had no idea it would blow up like this."

Months ago, Bennett's priorities were certainly far different. On Dec. 31 of last year he and his girlfriend, Andrea Terpenkas, had plans to go to a friend's place but stayed home because Bennett wasn't feeling well. He only got worse overnight and a trip to the hospital and a round of X-rays ensued, along with that gloomy aforementioned diagnosis.

He was wheeled into the operating room as soon as possible, and he would stay in the hospital for almost three months. He would endure nine surgeries over that span, and by the time he was finally in recovery he would have to learn again how to walk and how to talk.

"It was the toughest two and a half months of our lives, but we made it through," he said.

Bennett, who was born in Calgary, grew up in Victoria and studied in Montreal before moving to Vancouver, had played in various funk, jazz and R&B outfits over the years, but had focused on other pursuits recently, including finding work as a web designer.

But his hospital stay shifted his perspective.

"I just kind of realized how

Silver lining

"It's great to have something so positive in a year that started out so bad and so rough."

Jim Bennett

On his viral success online following a very serious illness scare.

important certain things are to me in life: friends and family and music," he said. "You can chase a career and try and make a decent living and buy a house, but you can't take money with you. I just really wanted to do something like music that I thought was really important to me."

He began playing bass with more frequency upon his release from hospital. Recording and editing his Get Lucky video took only a few hours, he said, and he plans on releasing more videos soon. He's also musing on recording an album of drum-and-bass Daft Punk covers next month, for which he's toying with the title Daft Bass.

Beyond the nearly 10,000 "likes" from YouTube viewers, he also received flattering feedback from Chic founding guitarist Nile Rodgers, who contributed Get Lucky's buoyant, silken guitar riff. After a fan sent him a link to the video, Rodgers tweeted the clip to his 76,000-plus followers with the comment: "This dude's a monster. He's chucking on the bass like Nard." (A reference to late Chic bassist Bernard Edwards).

Bennett hopes his newfound recognition translates into more opportunities in music. He's open to teaching bass locally or online through Skype, he'd love to secure session work or a touring gig and adds with a sheepish laugh: "If there's any bands out there that are looking for a bass player..."

He has a clean bill of health now but says he won't fully feel like himself until January, with some residual back pain and other aches to deal with in the meantime.

Even if further opportunities don't spring from his unlikely viral hit, Bennett says Get Lucky has done a lot for him. "It's just great to have something so positive in a year that started out so bad and so rough," he said.

Look awkward, be safe

Faux tattoos help identify allergies

Just when you thought childhood awkwardness couldn't get any more ... awkward, there's always something to take it to the next level.

This time around it's SafetyTats. The premise of the invention is to identify children's allergies or other vital information through temporary tattoos that can be applied anywhere on the body.

There are two different types of SafetyTats. The original ones, which are applied like regular temporary tattoos, come with standard allergy messages (such as "food allergy: nuts") and quick stick write-ons, which come in various neon colors, apply similar to a Band-Aid and allow users to write custom allergy messages.

"I remember going to an amusement park one week-end with my three kids and thinking 'I don't want to have to worry about them getting lost,'" said SafetyTats creator

Michele Welsh. "I wrote my cellphone number on their arms with a ball point pen but eventually it rubbed off during the day and that's when I knew that I had to create something else."

The original safety tats last approximately three to five days depending on the activeness of the child. The quick stick write-ons last up to two weeks and are waterproof.

A boys with dustpans, girls on lawn mowers revolution

Gender roles. Our expert weighs in on a study that says siblings can have a large impact on gender stereotyping

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

"Men with sisters appear to do less housework, even in middle age." A provocative and, I think, curious statement to make.

Yet, according to a paper published in the Journal of Politics, decades of data have led to this conclusion. The data suggest siblings can have as large an impact on gender stereotyping as parents can when running a home.

The report goes as far as to say that the roles of brother and sister can resemble those of husband and wife. (Frankly, the only way my kids resemble a husband and wife is in a Bickersons arguing sort of way.)

How to prevent this from happening in our own home? I'm thinking maybe we could start with the philosophy of "It's only work if you're not having fun." I say this, as due to my excellent parenting skills, (or admittedly by some strange fluke), I happen to have tricked my youngest son, 11, into thinking that housework is fun.

He routinely mops the kitchen floor, vacuums, and sprays glass cleaner on glass cleanable surfaces with wild abandon. He requested, and received, his very own toilet brush, that he also uses with surprising frequency. He does all of this ... for fun. In fact, the day that school ended he asked if he could mop as a sort of "welcome to summer holidays treat." I magnanimously let him.

He does have siblings (a brother and two sisters), none of whom would even pick up a duster unless it were on fire, and probably not even then unless I threatened to take their phones away.

Maybe the fact that there is another brother in the house counteracts the unintentional yet subliminal boy versus girl housecleaning message. Whatever the case, the theory doesn't seem to hold water in my house.

But if that's what the research shows for other families, maybe on the whole we need to do something about this, mostly to save our daughters, and our son's future partners from having to pick up the slack, and the dirty clothes, thanks to our own procreation of boys.

The study tells us that our kids are watching us — how we divvy up the chores we do as adults and how we assign chores to our children.

Does your daughter mow the lawn? Does your son set the table? Do you have "boy jobs" and "girl jobs" in your house? Take some time to mix it up this week. Unfortunately I can't lend my own son out, as the floors need cleaning at my house. KATHY'S NEW BOOK I AM SO THE BOSS OF YOU: AN 8 STEP GUIDE TO GIVING YOUR FAMILY THE BUSINESS IS AVAILABLE AT BOOKSTORES EVERYWHERE. # A picnic just isn't a picnic without Greek Pasta Salad

KAREN HUMPHREY
YummyMummyClub.ca

This salad is packed with vegetables and lightly kissed with a home made balsamic dressing so it's light and fresh.

Ingredients

- 2 cups bow tie pasta
  - 1 cup halved grape tomatoes
  - 1/4 cup thinly sliced red onion
  - 1 cup chopped cucumber
  - 1/2 sweet yellow pepper, seeded and chopped
  - 1/2 sweet red pepper, seeded and chopped
  - 4 oz feta cheese, crumbled
  - 1/4 cup black olives, sliced
  - 2 tbsp chopped fresh dill
- ### Dressing
- 3 tsp balsamic vinegar
  - 2 tbsp olive oil
  - 1/4 tsp honey
  - salt and pepper
  - squirt mustard

This recipe serves four. KAREN HUMPHREY OF YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA

1. In pot of boiling salted water, cook pasta according to package directions. Drain and rinse with cool water. Set aside.
2. Toss pasta with tomatoes, onion, cucumber, peppers, feta, olives, and dill.

3. Measure dressing ingredients in a mason jar. Screw on lid and shake until everything is well mixed together. Drizzle over pasta and toss. You don't have to use all the dressing. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve right away or chill for about an hour before serving. YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA IS AN ONLINE RESOURCE TO HELP WOMEN SURVIVE MOTHERHOOD.

Lunch. Fresh and Light Summer Pasta Salad

1. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil.
2. Meanwhile, in a large serving bowl toss the tomatoes with a few hefty pinches of salt and some black pepper. Let stand for 10 minutes, then add the lemon zest, oil and goat cheese and toss well.

3. Add the pasta to the boiling water, stir and cook according to package instructions until just al dente. Drain the pasta (it's fine to have some water still clinging to the pasta), then add it to the bowl. Toss until the cheese is melted. Taste and season with salt and pepper to taste. Divide the pasta between

4 serving bowls, then sprinkle each portion with some of the herbs. Serve. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 3 cups chopped fresh tomatoes (about 1-inch pieces)
- Kosher salt and ground black pepper
- 1 tsp grated lemon zest
- 1 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil
- 5 oz goat cheese, crumbled
- 8 oz whole-wheat penne or fusilli pasta
- 1 cup mixed chopped fresh herbs (such as parsley, basil, oregano, mint, dill, chives, cilantro and tarragon)

Grilled meat mingles with fruit

1. Heat the grill to medium. Heat the oven to 400 F.
2. While the grill and oven are heating, in a blender combine half of the feta, the lemon juice, buttermilk and olive oil. Blend until smooth. Season with pepper, then stir in the remaining feta. Set aside.
3. Split each pita pocket into 2 rounds. Spray the rough sides of each round lightly with the cooking spray, then sprinkle

Ingredients

- 4 oz feta cheese, crumbled, divided
- 1 tbsp lemon juice
- 1/3 cup buttermilk
- 1 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil
- Ground black pepper
- Two 6-inch whole-wheat pita pockets
- Olive oil cooking spray
- Kosher salt
- 1-lb pork tenderloin, trimmed
- 3 cups arugula
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced red onion
- 1/2 cup each fresh mint leaves and cilantro leaves
- 2 cups cubed and seeded watermelon
- 1 cup cubed seedless cucumber lightly with salt. Cut each round into 8 triangles. On a rimmed baking sheet arrange the triangles in a single layer. Bake on the middle shelf of the oven until golden and crisp, about 8 minutes. Set aside to cool.

4. Spray the pork with the olive oil spray, then season it lightly with salt and pepper. Grill it directly over the heat, turning it a quarter turn at a time, until a thermometer inserted at the thickest part registers 140 F to 145 F for medium, about 6 minutes per side. Transfer the pork to a plate, cover it loosely with foil and let it rest for 10 minutes.

5. In a large bowl, combine the arugula, onion, mint, cilantro, watermelon and cucumber. Add the pork juices from the resting pork to the feta dressing, whisking to incorporate. Place a mound of the salad on each of 4 plates. Slice the pork crosswise into rounds 1/2 inch thick and arrange a quarter of the slices on top of each mound of salad. Drizzle the dressing on top of the pork, then divide the pita croutons between the plates. Serve immediately. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/SARA MOULTON, AUTHOR OF SARA MOULTON'S EVERYDAY FAMILY DINNER.

Come for a cold one, stay for the sites: Beer can mean big business for cities

Happily ever crafter.

The transformation of a once-forgotten neighbourhood in Cleveland paints a picture of the way in which breweries can bring on a boom

To see how a small business can transform a neighbourhood, just follow the barrels.

About 30 years ago, beer lovers wanting to create their own drinks started taking over abandoned old buildings in rundown city districts, refitting them with tanks, kettles and casks, and churning out beer.

The byproduct was a boom in craft beer drinkers: Barrels shipped have more than doubled in the past decade, according to trade publication Beer Marketer's Insights.

But beer drinkers weren't the only beneficiaries. The arrival of a craft brewery was also often one of the Brewer Joel Warger tends to a batch of beer in the Great Lakes Brewing Co. in Cleveland's Ohio City neighbourhood. first signs that a neighbourhood was changing. From

New England to the West Coast, new businesses bubbled up around breweries, drawing young people and creating a vibrant community where families could plant roots and small businesses could thrive.

It happened in Cleveland. Once an industrial powerhouse, the Rust Belt city has been losing residents since the 1950s. Manufacturing jobs disappeared. The city nearly went bankrupt in 1978.

Marred by abandoned buildings and boarded-up stores after several hard decades, the downtown Ohio City neighbourhood, just west of the Cuyahoga River, which divides Cleveland, was "perceived as dangerous and blighted" into the 1980s, says Eric Wobser. He works for Ohio City Inc., a non-profit that promotes residential and commercial development while trying to preserve the neighbourhood's older buildings.

Enter Great Lakes Brewing, which opened in 1988. Over the years, it's built a brewery and a brewpub from structures that once housed a feed store, a saloon and a livery stable.

"We resurrected all of them," says Pat Conway, who founded Great Lakes with his brother, Daniel. "We've beautified the neighbourhood, provided a stunning restoration."

er, a bike shop, a tortilla factory, as well as restaurants and bars — followed. Newcomers are flocking to the neighbourhood, even though Cleveland's overall population is still declining. The city repaved the quiet street next to the brewery, Market Avenue, with cobblestones, and poured millions into renovating the West Side Market, whose origins date back to the 19th century.

Today, more than 100 vendors sell produce, meat, cheese and other foods there. What's going on in Cleveland is happening across the country.

Trendy small businesses like breweries and younger residents have been returning to downtown neighbourhoods in many cities across the U.S. The biggest cities are growing faster than the suburbs around them, according to census data.

Another benefit of the brewery boom: Manufacturers like brewers typically pay workers more than service businesses like restaurants or shops do. That's good for local economies.

The cost of smoking doesn't end with the ever-increasing price of a pack of cigarettes

COURTNEY M.
FOWLER
Metro World News

No matter how you look at it, smoking is expensive — beyond the actual pack of smokes, treatment expenses and health care for smokers often break the bank.

A new study from Ohio State University shows another way that smoking has become a burden: through those little bits of time smokers use to light up.

According to the June study, employing smokers will cost employers upward of $5,800 per smoker, per year. The costs due to loss of productivity because of periodic smoke breaks is more than $3,000 per smoker, per year. Attorney Gregg Salka, of the law firm Fisher & Phillip, represents employers who are concerned that employing smokers is bad for business.

In a world where time is money, smoke breaks can quickly add up. ISTOCK

As a representative for the employers, what are your biggest concerns about employing smokers?

Employers that have employees who take breaks in increments of five to 20 minutes throughout the day; if those employees are hourly, they need to be compensated. So I'm assuming that would decrease productivity just as someone who's browsing Amazon or posting on Facebook.

Is there anything else you'd like people to know about smoking and work-place productivity?

I think (employers) should really treat all their employees the same, regardless of whether they're smokers or non-smokers or Facebookers or non-Facebookers. An individual who is taking a break away from working time for whatever reason should be treated and disciplined the same.

The Orioles' Chris Davis follows through on his 37th home run of the season against the Blue Jays on Sunday in Baltimore. GAIL BURTON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big bird ruffles Blue Jays' feathers

MLB. Davis helps Orioles win series over division rival, rolling into all-star break with 37 round-trippers

With one final power surge before the all-star break, Chris Davis earned himself a place in baseball's record book and generated momentum for the Home Run Derby.

Davis hit his 37th home run to tie the AL mark prior to the break, and the Baltimore Orioles cruised past the Toronto Blue Jays 7-4 Sunday.

Davis doubled in two runs in the first inning and hit a two-run homer in the third to give him 93 RBIs, second-most in the majors behind Detroit's Miguel Cabrera. He and Cabrera are the only players in major-league history to have 30 homers and 90 RBIs before the all-star game.

"Superhuman," Toronto manager John Gibbons said. "He's having some kind of year. I saw him a little bit when he was in Texas coming up. He could always hit home runs. He got his opportunity here to play every day and he's taken advantage of it. It's pretty impressive."

By going deep in a fourth straight game, Davis equalled Reggie Jackson's AL mark of 37 homers before the break, set in 1969. The major-league record is 39, by Barry Bonds in 2001.

Davis has already reached career highs in home runs and RBIs with 66 games left in the regular season.

"I think it's something definitely to be proud of," Davis said. "It means I've been doing my job, but it also speaks volumes about the guys in front of me getting on base and really swinging the bats well."

Davis has been facing a shift lately, but there's no defending a ball that clears the wall.

"You can't shift to the stands," Orioles manager Buck Showalter said. "They don't allow you to put anybody out there. So hit it where the grass doesn't grow."

Verlander's no-hit bid falls short

Justin Verlander's no-hit bid was finally over in the seventh inning — and before refocusing, the Detroit ace saw his shortstop do something amusing.

"When the double was hit, and the ball came back in, everybody started cheering," Verlander said. "(Jhonny) Peralta caught the ball and looked up at the board checking the hits. That's when I knew he didn't know. I was like, 'Come on, Jhonny.'"

Verlander fell seven outs short of his third career no-hitter, but the Detroit ace looked sharp in his final start before the all-star break to lead the Tigers to a 5-0 victory over the Texas Rangers on Sunday.

Mitch Moreland's two-out double broke up Verlander's bid. Verlander (10-6) left the game in the seventh with a tight right quad muscle, having allowed one hit and three walks. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fröome takes off to win 15th stage

British rider Chris Fröome showed why he remains the overwhelming Tour de France favourite by winning Sunday's grueling 15th stage up to Mont Ventoux to extend his lead over main rival Alberto Contador.

Fröome's acceleration about two-thirds of the way up the 21-kilometre course was too much for two-time former champion Contador. The Spaniard dropped back and finished about one minute 40 seconds behind.

The Great son: Trevor Gretzky arrives in B.C.

Baseball. Minor-league outfielder swarmed by media as his Boise Hawks prepare for series in Vancouver

Trevor Gretzky arrived in Vancouver on Wednesday for baseball, but it's his hockey roots that are drawing attention his way.

As an outfielder with the Boise Hawks, Gretzky is in town for a five-game series against the Toronto Blue Jays' Class-A short-season affiliate, the Vancouver Canadians. But he is under no illusions about what's causing the spotlight around him.

"I know it happens because of my dad," said Gretzky, whose father Wayne played 21 seasons in the National Hockey League, bringing four Stanley Cup championships to the city of Edmonton, and winning the Hart Trophy for the league's most valuable player nine times.

The baseball-playing Gretzky grew up in Los Angeles, ditching hockey at a young age to focus on football and baseball.

"If I had grown up in Canada I would've probably played hockey," he said.

As a teenager at Oaks Christian High School in California,

Gretzky was named starting quarterback of the prep school's football team. Three games into his senior season, however, a shoulder injury halted his young football career.

So Gretzky turned his sights back to baseball and in 2011, he was drafted by the Chicago Cubs in the seventh round of the MLB amateur draft.

Gretzky played last season in the Arizona Rookie League, batting .304 in 25 games.

"I kind of always knew I was going to come back to baseball," he said. "I just didn't know when."

Before Boise's trip to Vancouver, Gretzky was in and out of the lineup, making appearances in just eight of the Hawks' first 25 games. Since Wednesday, he's earned three straight starts.

Through 11 games this season, Gretzky is batting .256 with 10 hits and one RBI.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You may not be a peacemaker by nature but you can help defuse an explosive situation by standing between the warring parties and insisting that they cool down.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

The only danger this week is that you might give up on something before you have really started. However difficult the task ahead of you may look it is not impossible and failure is not a foregone conclusion.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may sometimes act as if you don't care about what's going on in the world but you do and over the next few days you will find ways to make a difference.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Listen to your head by all means today but let your heart have the last word. Your emotions run deep and someone is about ignite your passions in a way they have not been ignited for quite some time.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

As it's the first day of a new week why not put your troubles behind you completely? Is that actually possible? Of course it is. Your reality is a reflection of what goes on in your mind.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Whatever you are working on you can and you will make a success of it, even if you make a few mistakes in the short-term. It's no big deal.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You have been through a stressful time of late, so wind down a bit and find ways to have fun without pushing yourself too hard physically or emotionally. Be kind to yourself today, and every day.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You deserve the best and you will get the best but it may not arrive quite as quickly as you expected. That's okay. The longer you have to wait the better the taste of success will be.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

What worried you yesterday is not what will worry you today and what worries you today won't be what worries you tomorrow. Which begs the question: why worry at all?

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Don't just assume that someone knows how much you care for them: spell it out so there can be no misunderstandings. Capricorn may have a reputation as being a bit of a cold fish but it's not true. You're really all heart.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may be behind in your schedule and you may be worrying how you can catch up but is there really any point? You know from experience that it will all work out in the end.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

It will pay you to be a bit more forgiving of people who have let you down or who do not come up to your exacting standards. SALLY BROMPTON
